

Newsletter MamboViewpoint January 2016

Dear donors, volunteers and other sympathisers of MamboViewpoint,

Clean Politics

After our new years' wishes we are sending you a next message in a new and exciting year. After John Maguguli became President of Tanzania in November 2015, developments have been accelerated. Corruption, the number one impediment towards development according to us, is being addressed! Not only in political correct language, but also in real deeds. We are experiencing decided progress. Each week new activities take place: NGOs that are only in business to receive money without actual contributing towards development are being closed. Government officials who are involved in corruption or not present at work are being fired. Expensive foreign trips by civil servants and politicians have been cancelled. Numerous ambitious projects for clean and accessible drinking water and for good healthcare for all Tanzanians are formed. These developments are putting us in a hopeful mood. We feel very supported.

Clean drinking water

During the last months in 2015 several extra water pumps have been installed. Hundreds of people have access to better drinking water. Hence they will become ill less often. We hope to realise more pumps in 2016. Furthermore the well for the pipeline has been improved in order that water will remain available longer in the dry season.

Music

The new year had a good start with the visit of three Dutch musicians who had sent several musical instruments in advance by shipping container. During three weeks, the last part of the school holidays, Mambo was a delight and feast for ears and eyes. Several musical talents were spotted. The idea is to form a musical group that will accompany the circus acts.

Healthcare

In the mean while the first volunteer for the healthcare project has arrived. A new group of TBAs (Traditional Birth Attendants) is being trained and later on the health committee will receive training and supervision. Furthermore a real doctor will train the staff of the dispensaries in the surroundings.
